PERSONAL

Miss Mary Capps, of Bethel, visited Mrs. J. R. Day last week.

Dr. J. W. Fitch, of Louisville, who came up for a bird hunt, was the guest of D. W. Doggett last week.

Thomas McQuitty, of Moorefield, and son, Walter McQuitty, of Sharps-burg, were visitors here Monday.

John Peters, who travels for the Monarch Range Company, visited his mother, Mrs. Laura Peters Tuesday and Wednesday.

Miss Lillian Redwine, who attends school at Lexington visited her sister, Mrs. Jo Day Thanksgiving Day remaining the balance of the week.

Brutus Kash and wife, of Keystone, West Virginia, who had been visiting relatives here for several days left for their home Monday by way of Cincinnati, where Mr. Kash had business.

GREATEST COOPERATIVE BODY

The Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association, which finished its preliminary work last week by the pooling of more than 180,000, 000 pounds of tobacco of the less than 210,000,000 pounds grown in the burley district in 1920, is the largest single cooperative association in the world; with 42,000 members and the probability that it can have between 8,000 and 10,000 more if it decides to permit those who so far have failed to sign up their crops with the association, to come into the organization.

The association covers probably a wider territory than any other cooperative body. It includes the counties of Anderson, Barren, Bath, Boone, Bourbon, Boyle, Bracken,
Bullitt, Carroll, Carter, Casey, Clark, Cumberland, Fayette, Fleming, Franklin, Gallatin, Garrard, Grant, Gray, son, Green, Hardin, Harrison, Hart,
Henry, Jefferson, Jessamine, Kenton,
Lincoln, Madison, Marion, Mason, Meade, Mercer, Morgan, Mountain, Nelson, Nicholas, Nolin, Pendleton, Powell, Robertson, Scott, Shelby, Spencer, Trimble, Washington and Woodford, in Kentucky; Clark, Dearborn, Franklin, Jefferson, Ohio and Switzerland,
in Indiana; Mason, Cabell, Wayne
and Logan in West Virginia; Brown, Adams, Clermont, Gallia and perhaps a few others in Ohio, and three counties in Tennessee, which raise about eight or ten million pounds. The production of the entire district ranges from 170,000,000 pounds in the poor years to 300,000,000 pounds when there is a full acreage and crop conditions are favorable.

Brings Many Millions

Aaron Sapiro, the California lawyer and cooperative genius under whose guidance the burley growers have organized, has said that it would be worth between twenty and thirty millions of dollars to the tobacco men to form an organization for the orderly marketing of their crops. This statement of Sapiro has been borne out by the fact that today which sold on the Lexington market in January 1921, for two three cents a pound has been resold
by speculators who bought it at 12
to 18 cent a pound when the manufacturer wanted that kind of tobacco. It is believed the growers lost twenty millions of dollars in Kentucky alone last year by their inability to hold their crops off the market, as many of their leaders advised them to do.

The districts as finally agreed upon and announced Saturday night,
are as follows:

THOMAS-STEWART

Word was received here several days ago of the marriage of J. J.
Thomas, of Preston, this county, and Miss Violet Stewart, of Hindman, Ky.
Hindman is 12 miles from Hazard, Perry Co. Mr. Thomas is the second son of Mrs. S. V. Johnson by her former husband, John Thomas, and is well known here, where he made his home for several years. His bride is the daughter of the President of the Hindman bank, and said to be an intelligent and attractive young lady. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas came to the home of Mr. Thomas' mother Tuesday.

JAMES B. SPRATT

James B. Spratt died at his home in Mt. Sterling Wednesday night of last week, after a long illness of heart trouble. Although he had been in poor health for some time, his death came suddenly and unexpectedly. Mr. Spratt was a native of Bath county, a son of Jack Spratt, deceased, and spent nearly all of his life in the vicinity of Sharpsburg.
He had accumulated a handsome fortune. He was a very liberal man.
During the past two years he gave $10,000 to educational purposes and about $5,000 to the Mary Childs Hospital in Mt. Sterling, besides numerous other charities. He was 76 years old at the time of his death and was a member of the Presbyterian Church. The burial was in the Sharpsburg cemetery. His nearest surviving relatives are cousins.

In order to accommodate the farmers of this immediate neighborhood an effort will be made to establish a tobacco warehouse with a re-drying plant attached. This could be done with a comparatively small outlay of money, and would doubtless pay as transportation of tobacco in hogsheads can be done cheaper than it can be done in the leaf. Besides the farmer would be dealing with home people that they know and would be furnishing employment to laboring men who would spend their money at home.

SPANISH DOUBLOONS

By CAMILLA KENYON

COPYRIGHT THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

TREASURE ISLAND.

Well, here's a new kind of "Treasure Island"—a kind that Stevenson himself would chuckle over, could he come back to read it. And by a woman, too! So, as you may easily imagine, it's different from the rank and file of the many stories about treasure islands.

Just the same, it's a real treasure island story—an unadorned island, adventures that have adventures, mystery, treachery, violence and Spanish doubloons. And this time, for good measure, love and romance and humor are thrown in.

The author, Camilla Kenyon, was born in San Francisco, of a family of a buccannier ancestor in the family. She says she sometimes thinks the old rover's soul may have got by mistake into her earthly frame. Anyway, she always has dotted on the sea tales of adventure, and now she has written one of her own that's better reading than most of those she has read.

Yes; it's sure different—the red-headed heroine tells the story herself! An interesting young person with a yarn that will keep you reading far beyond bedtime.

CHAPTER I.

—I—

An Aunt Errand.

Never had life seemed more fair and smiling than at the moment when Aunt Jane's letter descended upon me like a bolt from the blue. The fact is, I was taking a vacation from Aunt Jane. Being an orphan, I was supposed to be under Aunt Jane's wing, but this was the merest fiction, for because of their activities against bootleggers, became known here. "Commissioner" Clark verified a report that his life had been threatened because of his action in cases coming before him where parties were charged with violation of the liquor laws.

Lexington—Hal C. Bowman, 69, farmer of this county, was killed instantly by a west-bound interurban car on the Versailles Pike about three miles from Lexington. According to the motorman, the car was about seventy-five feet from the crossing of the Versailles and Gum Lane pikes when he saw Mr. Bowman standing on the track and with his back to the approaching car. The motorman applied the brakes and blew the whistle but was unable to stop the car.

Frankfort—Under the auspices of the Filson Club, of Louisville, and the Kentucky State Historical Society, the body of William T. Price, known internationally as the author of "The Analysis of Play Construction" and "The Technique of the Drama," will be interred in the Frankfort Cemetery, beside the grave of Kentucky's well-known poet, Robert Burns Wilson. Mr. Price was born in Jefferson County, near Louisville, and was a nephew of Gen. Sterling Price.

Paris—Miss Sarah Daniel, for several years engaged in farming in Bourbon County, filed voluntary petition in bankruptcy in Federal Court in Lexington, placing her assets as $800, and her liabilities at $5,100.25. With the assistance of a negro, Miss Daniel for a number of years conducted a farm of 300 acres in this county. An expert in all branches of farming she was as much at home behind the plow handles and in the harvest field as in the kitchen or dining room. She built with her own hands a large barn, a corn crib, two silos and painted the residence. Her work as an interior decorator, took premiums at the state and bluegrass fairs.

Lexington—Two ears of seed corn, believed to be more than a thousand years old, will be planted next spring by Prof. A. M. Miller, head of the department of geology at the University of Kentucky. Scientists at the university have hopes that the seed still retains its vitality. The ears were sent to Professor Miller by Albert Wachenswants, of Chillicothe, O., who said he obtained them from Dr. William C. Mills, archeologist and museum curator, of Columbus, O. "Dr. Miller claimed to have found the grain a little mouldy, in a jar, sealed hermetically or by accident, in a mound near Chillicothe whose age is admitted to be several thousands of years," says the Literary Digest in a recent issue.

Frankfort—The right of women to serve on juries will be decided by the Court of Appeals when it hands down an opinion in the case of Frank H. Sain against the commonwealth, an appeal from the decision of the Letcher Circuit Court having been filed with the Court of Appeals. Three women served on the jury which gave Sain a life sentence in the penitentiary for the murder of M. W. Crabtree. Sain appealed from the judgment of Letcher Circuit Court on the grounds that women have no right to serve on juries.

Louisville—Col. C. L. Daugherty, commandant of the Confederate Home at Pewee Valley, accompanied by a score of residents of the home left for Chattanooga to attend the thirty-first annual reunion of the United Veterans.

Frankfort—A petition in bankruptcy was filed in Federal Court by M. D. McFarland and George K. West, doing business under the firm name of McFarland & West, of Delaplane, Scott County. They list their liabilities at $140.85, with assets amounting to $420.45.

Chintzes and cretonnes, brightly patterned, are pleasing against a plain wall.

Hat Cleaning.
If the velvets hat is shabby, put some finely powdered salt in the oven. When it is quite hot, rub it into the hat with soft paper. Pay special attention to very soiled parts and discard the soiled paper for new occasionally. Brush with a very stiff brush. Velours responds remarkably to such treatment.

To Cut Cardboard.

Cardboard is used for so many purposes that it is well to know how to cut straight edges. Never use scissors for the purpose, because that makes ragged edges. First lay a brass-edged ruler on the cardboard with brass edge upward. As the ruler is beveled, the brass will be a fraction of an inch above the board when properly placed. Now procure a very sharp pen-knife, hold it firmly, and draw the knife along the brass edge. Do not attempt to cut through the cardboard the first time, but merely score it deeply. Now remove the ruler and cut through the incision. The result will be as clean a cut edge as a picture dealer can make on his mats.

Flowers Not for Sick.
All flowers grown in the house are dangerous in rooms of illness. Although they are invariably taken out of the room, there is a danger in their "adverse influences," though whether they meant me or the family lawyer I was not sure.

Miss Higgleby-Browne, however, had assisted Aunt Jane to find herself, and as a consequence Aunt Jane, for the comparatively trifling outlay needed to finance the Higgleby-Browne expedition, would shortly be the richer by one-fourth of a vast treasure of Spanish doubloons. The knowledge of this hoard was Miss Higgleby-Browne's alone. It had been revealed to her by a dying sailor in a London hospital, whither she had gone on a mission of kindness—you gathered that Miss Browne was precisely the sort to take advantage when people were helpless and unable to fly from her. Why the dying sailor chose to make Miss Browne the repository of his secret, I don't know—this still remains for me the unsolved mystery. But when the sailor closed his eyes there was a map—had become Miss Higgleby-Browne's.

Miss Browne now had clear before her the road to fortune, but unfortunately it led across the sea and quite out of the route of steamer travel. Capital in excess of Miss Browne's resources was required. London proving to be before its great opportunity, Miss Browne had shaken off its dust and come to New York, where a mysteriously potent influence had guided her to Aunt Jane. Through Miss Browne's great organizing abilities, not to speak of those newly brought to light in Aunt Jane, a party of staunch comrades had been assembled, a steamer engaged to meet them at Panama, and it was by, for the island in the blue Pacific main!

With this lyrical outburst Aunt Jane concluded the body of her letter. A small cramped postscript informed me that it was against Miss H.B.'s wishes that she revealed their plans to anyone, but that she did want to hear from me before they sailed from Panama, where a letter might reach her if I was prompt.

"And of course," I explained to Bess as I hurried things into my bags, "if a letter can reach her so can I. At least I must take the chance of it. What those people are up to I don't know—probably the man to hold her for ransom and murder her outright. If it is not forthcoming. Or perhaps some of them will marry her and share the spoils with Miss Higgleby-Browne. Anyway, I must get to Panama in time to save her."

"I Must Get to Panama in Time to Save Her."

"Or you might go along to the island," suggested Bess.

I paused to glare at her.

"Bess! And let them murder me, too?"

"Or marry you—" cooed Bess.

One month later I was climbing out of a lumbering back before the Tivoli hotel, which rises square and white and imposing on the low green height above the old Spanish city of Panama. In the spite of the melting tropical heat there was a chill fear at my heart, the fear that Aunt Jane and her hand of treasure-seekers had already departed on their quest.

I crossed the broad gallery and plunged into the cool dimness of the lobby in the wake of the bellboys who, discerning a helpless prey, had swooped on me upon my bags.

"Miss Jane Harding?" repeated the clerk, and at the cool negation of his tone my heart gave a sickening downward swoop. "Miss Jane Harding and her party have left the hotel!"

"For—the island?" I gasped.

He raised his eyebrows. "Can't say, I'm sure." He gave me an appraising stare. Perhaps the woe in my face touched him, for he descended from the eminence of the hotel clerk where he dwelt apart sufficient to add, "Is it important that you should see her?"

"I am her niece. I have come all the way from San Francisco expecting to join her here."

The clerk meditated, his shrewd eyes piercing the very secrets of my soul.

"She knew nothing about it," I hastened to add. "I intended it for a surprise."

This candor helped my cause. "Well," he said, "that explains her not leaving any word. As you are her niece, I suppose it will do no harm to tell you that Miss Harding and her party embarked this morning on the freighter Rufus Smith, and I think it very likely that the steamer has not left port. If you like I will send a man to the waterfront with you and you may be able to go on board and have a talk with your aunt."

Did I thank him? I have often wondered when I waked up in the night. I have a vision of myself dashing out of the hotel, and then the back that brought me is bearing me away. Bellboys hurried my bags in after me, and I threw them haphazardly. Madly we clattered over cobbled ways. Out on the smooth waters of the roadstead lay ships of great and small, ships with striped masts and smokeless funnels, others with faint gray spirals wreathing upward from their stacks. Was one of these the Rufus Smith, and would I reach there at last—before the thin gray feather became a thick black plume? I thought of my aunt at the mercy of these unknown adventurers with whom she had set forth, helpless as a little fat pigeon among hawks, and I felt, desperately, that I must reach her, must save her from them and bring her safe back to shore. How I was to do this at the eleventh hour, plus about fifty-seven minutes, as at present, I hadn't considered. But experience had taught me that once in my clutches Aunt Jane would offer about as much resistance as a slightly melted wax doll. She gets so soft that you are almost afraid to touch her for fear of leaving dents.

So to get there, get there, get there, was the one prayer of my soul.

I got there, in a boat hastily commandeered by the hotel clerk's deputy. We brought up under the side of the little steamer, and the wide surprised face of a Swedish deckhand stared down at us.

"Let me aboard! I must come aboard," I cried.

Other faces appeared, then a rope-ladder. Somehow I was mounting it—a dizzy feat to which only the tumult of my emotions made me indifferent. Bare brawny arms of sailors clutched at me and drew me to the deck. There at last, I was the center of a circle of speechless and astonished persons, all men but one.

"Well?" demanded a large breezy voice. "What's this mean? What do you want aboard my ship?"

I looked up at a red-faced man in a large straw hat.

"I want my aunt," I explained.

"Your aunt?" he repeated. "Why the devil should you think I've got your aunt?"

"You have got her," I replied with firmness. "I don't see her, but she's here somewhere."

The captain of the Rufus Smith shook two large red fists above his head.

"Another lunatic!" he shouted. "Go as soon as a white horse and a minister aboard as to sea in a floating bedlam!"

As the captain's angry thunder died away came the small, anxious voice of Aunt Jane.

"What's the matter? Oh, please tell me what's the matter," she whispered, as she edged her way into the group. Her eyes, round, pale, blinking a little in the tropical glare, roved over the circle until they lit on me. Right where she stood Aunt Jane petrified. Her poor little chin dropped until it disappeared altogether in the folds of a plump neck, and she remained speechless, stricken, immobile as a wax figure in an exhibition.

"Aunt Jane," I said, "you must come right back to shore with me." I spoke calmly, for unless you are perfectly calm with Aunt Jane you fuster her.

She replied only by a slight躬bing in her throat, but the other woman spoke in a loud voice, addressed not to me but to the universe in general.

"The Young Person is mad!" It was an unmistakably British intonation.

"Anybody that ain't goin' in that direction is welcome to jump overboard."

IN EXISTENCE BY COMMAND

Present City of Halifax Was Founded Under Order Given by British Government.

Halifax is one of that small number of places that were commanded to come into existence, and obeyed. Acadia was ceded to the British crown by the treaty of Utrecht in 1713, but little or nothing was done for a third of a century to give it a British population. Finally, in the spring of 1749, the British government sent out in transports, conveyed by war ships, 2,576 settlers, for the most part discharged soldiers and their families. They were well supplied with means of all kinds, and took to found a city on the shores of Chebucto bay, which they accordingly did naming the place Halifax. In compliment to George Montague, earl of Halifax, the member of the British government under whose immediate auspices the settlement was undertaken. It became at once the capital of Nova Scotia, and such it has continued to be to the present day. It is, therefore, the oldest political city under the British flag in all Canada.

Enough Said.

Frequently a question contains its own answer. Such a question was the one put recently by a Kansas young woman who had failed to qualify for a position as teacher. Feeling that she had not been considerably dealt with, she wrote: "I think I am entitled to an explanation of why I failed, anyway."—Boston Transcript.

As a Matter of Fact, George Was Very Far From Trying to "Rush the Season."

One morning, while folks still complained of the protracted hot weather, and the men had not discarded their straw hats in favor of the soft hats now in vogue, the woman's course took her past the establishment of one of the leading silversmiths of the city.

Busy about the entrance of the building was a well-groomed colored man, whose outfit was rendered complete by a stylish light brown derby hat.

While the woman made the mental reservation that the wearer was somewhat only with such headgear, a handsome motorcar drew up at the curb, and there alighted a fine-looking gentleman, whose appearance and bearing bespoke authority and success.

"Good morning, George," was his cheery greeting to the smiling colored man. See you are early with your fall hat, ain't you?"

"Well, no, boss," answered George. "It ain't that I see early with mah new fall hat. No, sah, mah last winter's hat."

He Wasn't Hungry.

A noted evangelist was preaching in the church of which six-year-old Bruce's parents were members. It was Sunday and the evangelist was to accompany the family home for dinner. He was a man of large physique, with an appetite reported to be in accord with his size. Bruce, lingering nearby, as the minister donned overcoat and hat, heard him remark to the head of the family that he was not hungry. Later, at the dinner, when the preacher was doing ample justice to all tempting viands, Bruce astonished those assembled at the board by saying: "Mister—, I thought you wasn't hungry." His remark brought a hearty laugh from the preacher.

Englishmen Housewives.

In Lancashire, England, where both husbands and wives work in the mills, the husband does more of the housework than perhaps any other husband in the world. Many of the men can make a bed and prepare a meal better than the wives can.

Why guess about it—
When you can know about it?

Suppose a guide said—

"This way there's a safe and pleasant road to your destination, with no risks or troubles on the way," and—

"That way there's a road that a good many have stalled on and turned back from, but you may get through."

Which would you take?

Two Important School Events

Two events observed in the schools of Bath county this year are notable and deserve especial mention.

On October 21st, the patrons of the rural schools were called upon by the County Superintendent to observe "Go To School Day."

In response to this call 615 mothers, fathers and friends of the schools visited their respective schools some time during that day.

The purpose of "Go To School Day" was to give the patrons a better opportunity of learning just what is being done for the rural school children and to better acquaint them with the actual work being done by their children.

On this day the regular class work was followed and the visitors were asked to observe carefully.

The course of study was explained and parents were taught that their children must do a certain amount of work in each subject before promotions can be made to the next higher grade at the end of the term.

On November 4th, the Sup't. again invited the patrons and friends of the rural schools to observe "Plant Day."

Planting shrubbery, flowers, etc., were to be planned with a view toward beautifying the school property of the county, and with this purpose in their hearts 163 parents visited their schools on this day and took with them trees, shrubbery, etc., to be planted in the school yards.

Many parents who could not visit the school and take part in "Planting Day" sent their contributions by their children.

So unanimous was the response that according to reports received from 33 of the 56 schools 327 shade trees were planted, and in addition to this hundreds of shrubs, lilies, lilacs, honey suckle, holly hocks, bulbs, rose bushes, etc., were sent out to adorn the countless children who just attend school in the year.

It is this such hearty cooperation as this that the rural schools will eventually come into its own, and will take the high place to which it is justly entitled.

Lewis-Warren Engagement

The Frankfort State Journal has the following announcement.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Lewis announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Virginia, to Mr. Felix Warren, the wedding to take place in December. Mr. Warren was formerly a Bath county boy and is now connected with the American Railway Express Company of Frankfort and Ravenscroft.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Warren will leave on a short visit to Washington, D. C.
